You can browse our site without telling us who you are or revealing any personal information about yourself. However, some of our web pages may use cookies but the individual user always remains anonymous unless registered.

Cookies are bits of arbitrarily generated data deposited on your computer's hard drive. A cookie will typically contain the name of the domain from which the cookie has come, the "lifetime" of the cookie, and a value, usually a randomly generated unique number. They are used in the following ways:

- to help us recognize you as a unique visitor when you return to our website and to allow us to tailor content or advertisements to match your preferred interests or to avoid showing you the same adverts repeatedly (enhancing your interactive experience and generally improving our service to you),
- to compile anonymous, aggregated statistics that allow us to understand how users use our site and to help us improve the structure of our website. We can never identify you personally in this way.

Two types of cookies may be used on this website – session cookies which are temporary cookies that remain in the cookie file of your browser until you leave the site and persistent cookies which remain in the cookie file of your browser for much longer (though how long will depend on the lifetime of the specific cookie). We may use a third party to serve advertisements on our site. Cookies may be associated with these advertisements to enable the advertiser to track the number of anonymous users responding to the campaign. We do not have access to or control of cookies placed by third parties.

Your internet browser can be set to notify you when you are sent a cookie, giving you the chance to decide whether or not to accept it, or to refuse cookies altogether. However, you may not be able to use all the interactive features of our site if cookies are disabled.
